The Long Awaited Gondwa Update Arrives Today with a Gameplay Trailer Featuring Robert Irwin November 15th - Victoria, Australia - The world of Path of Titans opens up today as Alderon Games introduces a brand-new region: Gondwa. This gorgeous chain of islands not only provides lush grounds for all the dinosaurs already in the game to roam, but also introduces skies and seas for the game's new aquatic & aerial creatures to conquer. Master flight as you weave through canyons & ocean cliffs and catch up an updraft with the pterosaur, Thalassodromeus; or will you instead delve the depths of undersea canyons and dance through coral reefs as the plesiosaur, Kaiwhekea. You can watch it all unfold with this new gameplay trailer featuring Robert Irwin -the son of the legendary Crocodile Hunter- and devoted conservationist & TV personality in his own right. The Gondwa update also brings in lots of new features and improvements. There have been months of optimizations that are apparent across all platforms, and several features of the new Unreal Engine 5 having been integrated into the game. For the photographers and auteurs among you, the replay system has been expanded to include new features & much greater stability and the team is excited to see all of your still lifes and machinima in the coming months! There have also been improvements to the Waystones and transporting friends, as the entire system has been simplified, with some gameplay mechanics added to maintain balance and prevent exploits or abuses. Come experience the grandeur of Gondwa in Path of Titans, which is available now on Nintendo Switch , PlayStation 4 & 5, Xbox One & Xbox Series X , PC (Windows, Mac, Linux), and Mobile (iOS & Android) with the Standard Founder's Pack costing $30 USD.
